Lives of the saints to read and narrate:

- St. Francis and the Seven Seas (Vision Book)

Encourage students to find a priest of Asian heritage in your area to interview. They should seek to find out about his family and culture, the Catholic faith in his culture, and how that influenced his vocation.

Many missionaries to Asia have become saints by being martyred for their faith. Have students create a page for their books by copying the definition of martyrdom from the Catechism of the Catholic Church (2473) onto a page and drawing or pasting images of these saints around it. Have the students remember the liturgical color that symbolizes martyrdom and use that color to create a border design for their page.

There are many areas of Asia where even today missionaries encounter hostility, laws prohibiting their work, and the possibility of martyrdom. Students should research and find at least one Asian country of which this is true. They should then compose a prayer for all Christians and missionaries in this area to include in their lesson book.

Students should research the Catholic explanations of the Church in China. They should then compose a written narration of their understanding of the subject. They could also compose a letter to the Chinese government expressing their opinion about this policy.

Many, many orphanages exist across Asia. Many missionaries work in these facilities. Have students write a reflection on how this work is imitating Christ. Relevant Scripture passages should be included.

Animals and their Habitats Lesson Book Pages:

Students can use this list or generate their own from books or web sites. They should illustrate the animal and on the facing page, record any information they've been able to gather including the animal's common name, species classification, habitat, food, shelter, and predators or any other unique facts they'd like to record.

Archaeology Lesson Book Pages:

Students can do a bit of book or internet research on each of the following topics and then create a main lesson book page that includes an artistic representation as well as a written narration of what they've discovered.

- China: Terra Cotta Warriors
- China: The Silk Road
- China: The Travels of Marco Polo
- China: This site (<http://www.china.org.cn/english/features/Archaeology/93062.htm>) gives students the opportunity to research top archaeological finds of recent years in China.
- Japan: Taiga Castle Ruins
- Japan: Imperial Castle
- Japan: Ancient Capitol of Nara

Folk Tale Lesson Book Pages:

Little ones should narrate the stories while mom keyboards. Printed narrations can be pasted into the main lesson book and the facing page illustrated. These narrations make great reading practice for beginning readers.
